October 2026 Feature Guide — Part 4

Smart Club Platform · what's new, who it's for, and what to watch out for Everything in this guide is built, reviewed and fully tested, and goes live with the next deployment. It is a companion to the three October guides that came before it; nothing here repeats those. Three changes this time: you can hand a captain their link yourself, umpire appointment messages carry the right venue and your own contact number, and scorecard corrections can reach your own people directly.

1. Copy a captain's link and share it yourself (union admins)

Squad requests and captain's reports both work through a personal link the platform sends to each captain. When that message doesn't land (WhatsApp fails, the captain changed numbers, or it simply sits unread), you no longer have to wait: both admin pages now have a Copy link button on every match row. One click puts the captain's exact link on your clipboard, and you can pass it on however you like — a club group chat, a direct message, a phone call while they type it in.

What to watch out for:

- The link is the form. Whoever holds it can name the squad or submit the report for that club, with no extra sign-in. Share it only with the person who should fill it in.
- Resend replaces it. Pressing Resend (or voiding a request, or reopening a report) issues a fresh link and kills every copy of the old one. Copy again after any resend.
- The button greys out once a row is submitted, void or expired, and its tooltip says which of those it is. Every copy is recorded against your name (the link itself is never stored).

If your browser blocks automatic copying (strict Safari settings do), a small window opens showing the link so you can copy it by hand. Nothing is lost.

2. Umpire appointments: the right ground, your contact number (operators)

Two fixes to the message an umpire, referee or scorer receives when appointed to a match.

- The venue is now always the real one. When a fixture had no ground allocated, the message used to say “venue TBC” even though everyone knew the match plays at the home club's ground. The message now falls back to exactly that, and placeholder entries like “TBC” in club records are ignored. You'll only see “venue TBC” when the ground genuinely isn't known anywhere.
- The sign-off is now yours. Every appointment message ends “If you are unavailable for this appointment, please contact … as soon as possible.” That contact used to be a fixed Medicoach address. It is now a per-client setting: for Titans it can read “Titans umpire - 083 709 2976”, and any client with nothing set keeps the default “Medicoach - 066 344 6443”.

The contact line applies to umpire and referee messages. Scorer appointments always keep the Medicoach default, since scorer queries are handled centrally. It appears on both email and WhatsApp (the new WhatsApp template was approved by Meta on 30 October).

Consequence to keep in mind: whatever you type is word-for-word what every umpire and referee of that client sees at the foot of every appointment, so keep it to a name and a number (there's a 120-character limit).

3. Scorecard corrections can reach your own people (operators)

When a captain files their report and flags the scorecard as wrong, the platform emails the correction request to the Medicoach operators. Some unions want their own people on that list too — for Dolphins, Jooma and Kershen. You can now add up to ten extra email addresses per client, and each correction email goes to them as well, with the match, the clubs and the captain's note in full. They don't get the operator console link, because they can't open the console; the email itself carries everything they need.

Consequence: these people receive an email for every correction request from that client, not a digest. Pick people who want that. Addresses are checked as you type, and anyone who is already an operator is skipped automatically so nobody gets it twice.

4. Where to set it all up: the Notices card (operators)

Both settings live in one place: operator portal → Clients → choose the client → the Notices card. It has two fields — the umpire & referee contact line, and the scorecard-correction recipients (one email per line) — and a single Save button. After saving you'll see “Saved — these are the live settings.”, and the change applies from the very next message the platform sends. No deployment, no restart.

Leaving the contact line blank is not an error: it simply means “use the Medicoach default”. Clearing the recipients list stops the extra correction emails; operators always keep receiving theirs.

Going live. These features switch on with the next deployment. Two follow-ups for that day: set the Titans contact line, and add the Dolphins correction recipients, both on the Notices card.
